

The NAC conducted anti-corruption training for employees of the Investment Agency and the penitentiary system

The National Anti-corruption Centre (NAC) organized training sessions within public authorities to promote integrity and prevent corruption this week. These included practical exercises and real-life cases, providing participants with tools to identify institutional vulnerabilities.

Officers from the NAC's Anti-corruption Education Directorate delivered training sessions for employees of the Investment Agency of Moldova. Topics covered included compliance with integrity standards, identifying and managing corruption risks, as well as applying rules of conduct in the exercise of official duties.

Additionally, the NAC representatives conducted training sessions for staff within the penitentiary system. Participants discussed the prevention of unlawful behavior, managing risk situations, and applying ethical principles in their daily work.

The National Anti-corruption Centre continues its training and awareness-raising activities to strengthen a climate of integrity within public institutions.
