

NAC trained employees of the National Centre for Judicial Expertise on measures to ensure institutional integrity

The National Anti-corruption Centre (NAC) has provided a training activity on measures to ensure institutional integrity for employees of the National Centre for Judicial Expertise (CNEJ).

Employees were informed about the legal regime of gifts, improper influences, denouncing corruption, the whistleblower institute, the role of the leader in ensuring and controlling institutional integrity, the procedure for assessing professional integrity and liability for lack of integrity. They were also advised on policies to ensure professional integrity.

Information and awareness-raising activities on integrity policies will contribute to making public agents accountable for respecting integrity standards, intolerance towards the phenomenon of corruption and developing a pro-active spirit in denouncing acts of corruption.
