

The "Integrity in Children's Understanding" campaign, organized by the NAC, continues. Over 1,500 young people informed about anti-corruption values

The National Anti-corruption Centre (NAC) continues this summer the information and awareness campaign " Integrity in Children's Understanding", a preventive educational initiative, oriented towards forming a culture of integrity among the younger generation.

As part of this campaign, the NAC officers, together with over 70 anti-corruption volunteers, carry out educational and interactive activities dedicated to children and adolescents throughout the country, especially within summer camps. The aim of these actions is to promote fundamental values such as integrity, honesty, civic responsibility and intolerance towards corruption.

To date, 1,515 children and young people from 13 holiday camps have participated in the educational sessions organized as part of the campaign. The activities include thematic workshops, free discussions and practical exercises, adapted to the age and level of understanding of the participants, aimed at providing them with a clear and accessible perspective on the concepts of corruption and ethical behaviour.

The presence of anti-corruption volunteers significantly contributes to creating an open and friendly environment, in which young people can ask questions, reflect critically and learn about the impact of corruption on society.

The "Integrity in Children's Understanding" campaign is part of the long-term commitment of the National Anti-Corruption Centre to invest in anti-corruption education and promote the values of the rule of law among the younger generations.

The NAC reconfirms its commitment to contributing to the development of an integrated society, based on respect for the law and ethical principles, by strengthening civic and moral education from an early age.
