

The NAC continues dialogue on integrity in public institutions. Over 400 civil servants participated in trainings organized by anti-corruption officers this week

Officers of the National Anti-corruption Centre (NAC) have brought the message of integrity to the attention of over 400 employees from various public institutions this week by organizing several dynamic and interactive educational activities.

The “Integrity for a Safe Society” campaign continued for civil servants of the Ministry of Internal Affairs and subordinate structures, being carried out at the Vulcănești Police Inspectorate and the Ciocana Police Inspectorate of the Chișinău Municipality Police Department. Through open dialogue and practical examples, the NAC officers emphasized the role of integrity as the foundation of good governance, encouraging the consolidation of an institutional climate based on ethics, responsibility and transparency.

In parallel, the “Integrity for Health” campaign continued at the Vulcănești Health Centre. Carried out in partnership with the Ministry of Health and AO HOMECARE, the initiative brought to the forefront the importance of fairness and accountability in the medical system. The NAC officers, together with anti-corruption volunteers, discussed with medical staff and patients the right to quality medical services and the ways to report possible acts of corruption.

At the same time, employees of the Ministry of Finance, the National Penitentiary Administration, the State Treasury and the General Directorate of Health and Social Assistance participated in training sessions dedicated to preventing corruption risks and strengthening internal integrity mechanisms.
